

ANDREW BURNSTEIN

Andrew Burnstein is the founder & President of Castlewood Productions Inc, a globally oriented provider of feature documentaries, fact-based TV series, and visual content for digital distribution.

From Shark Week to the National News, Andrew Burnstein has excelled in creating award-winning programming across a broad spectrum of factual genres including science, nature, health, sports, and lifestyle.

Andrew's diverse career in broadcast media began in his hometown of Vancouver as a reporter and writer for BCTV News, where he was a finalist for the prestigious Jack Webster Award for excellence in journalism. Prior to forming Castlewood in late 2007 he was a producer at CBC and TSN, and for 6 years headed EPI, the production and distribution arm of Discovery Channel Canada.

Career highlights include participation as a producer, director and writer for episodes of CBC Television's most ambitious documentary project, Canada: A People's History (2001), and later, as Director of EPI, Andrew was instrumental in the financing and producing at least a dozen International Treaty Co-Productions with broadcasters in the UK, France, South Africa, Australia, and Germany.

As Executive Producer and creative director of Castlewood Productions Andrew has conceived and produced original factual content for all the leading media companies in Canada, including Bell Media, Shaw Media, and CBC Television. His programs are distributed worldwide on both conventional television and digital streaming platforms.

Most recently Andrew led the production of a milestone 10th season of the hit gameshow CASH CAB, and successfully launched an integrated YouTube channel, BrandmadeTV, about how some of the most iconic brands are made.

Andrew is a graduate of both University of British Columbia and British Columbia Institute of Technology. He lives with his family in Toronto.
